EPA, DO YOUR JOB.

For more than two decades the people of Bristol Bay, Alaska, have lived under the threat of Pebble Mine. If built, it will cause irreparable damage to the watershed, which supports a $2.2 billion annual fishery, generates 16,000 American jobs, and sustains the world’s last intact salmon-based cultures.

“We are asking the Environmental Protection Agency to do their job, so that we can do ours.”

— Captain Katherine Carscallen
3rd Generation Bristol Bay Commercial Fisherman

An EPA veto of the mine provides lasting protections for the region.

EVERY DAY THEY DELAY, THE FATE OF BRISTOL BAY HANGS IN THE BALANCE.

VETO PEBBLE MINE

StopPebbleMineNow.org